No. 24. ✓ One Reel

YOUNG AMERICA is given a treat in this week's Screen Magazine by being taken on a hike with Big Bill Edwards, one of the most prominent Boy Scout officials. One of the chief articles in the American credo is that Lillian Russell is as young now as she was fifteen years ago, and from these pictures it would certainly seem so. She tells us some of her most cherished beauty secrets. Next, we are introduced to the diving beetle, which is shaped like a submarine and is just as deadly to other insects. We then see a miniature gas plant and the way in which our illuminating gas is refined. "A bit o' humor now and then is relished by the best of men," and so we see the death of the well-known citizens of Jaggtown, the Beer Bug. A futurist movie of Thomas Edison closes this week's issue.
